The British Medical Journal The BMJ has several articles on Brexit. Pre referendum they were on the side of Remain but here they attempt to look forward. They report from across the UK healthcare (doi:10.1136/bmj.i3591) and offer many views about the results. Some predict worsening staff shortages in the NHS (doi:10.1136/bmj.i3604) and others foresee the collapse of research budgets (doi:10.1136/bmj.i3600)

Other thinkers... Danny Dorling from the London School of Economics writes a blog. Find his Brexit thoughts here...

NHS CONFEDERATION

Brexit FAQs for the NHS: your questions answered

The NHS confederation offers some practical thoughts on Brexit with some FAQs. Their NHS European Office has produced a set of frequently asked questions which relate to the potential implications of leaving the EU on the NHS. It covers the facts around issues such as compliance with EU laws and regulations, recruiting and retaining EU staff and accessing EU funding.

The King's Fund

The King's Fund considers wider issues. Health is not an area of significant EU competence; its role is by and large limited to supporting member states in their health endeavours. Nevertheless, the impact of the UK's vote to leave the EU could have major implications for health and social care, not least because it has ushered in a period of significant economic and political uncertainty at a time when the health and care system is facing huge operational and financial pressures. While the impact on health and social care services of leaving the EU is impossible to forecast, it is clear that a number of important issues will need to be resolved, five of which they set out here...

care

And goes on to discuss the implications for European Physios and UK Physios. Find the link here

The CSP stresses the need to retain focus on these three challenges;

- expanding the physiotherapy workforce to meet service needs
- developing preventive services
- investing in community and primary
